Little Rock, AR — The Return of the Omega Ball, presented by the Natural State Ques of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc., was a striking celebration of tradition, culture, and timeless sophistication. Held on December 13 at the Four Points by Sheraton in Little Rock, Arkansas, the event delivered an unforgettable evening rooted in legacy and community pride.

From the moment guests arrived, the atmosphere felt intentional and elevated. Deep tones of purple and gold set the visual backdrop, while formal attire transformed the venue into a showcase of Black excellence. The Omega Ball was not simply an elegant gathering—it was a living reflection of history, brotherhood, and refinement.

Tanisha's TAKE!

I was drawn to the energy in the room. Every pose, every candid exchange, and every confident smile told a story. Sharp tuxedos, flowing gowns, and radiant presence filled the space, creating moments that felt both powerful and personal. Through my lens, it was clear this was a night where tradition met modern expression.

Music by DJ Big JJ provided the perfect soundtrack, seamlessly blending classic appeal with contemporary rhythm. Guests moved freely between conversation and celebration, enjoying the ambiance, a lively cash bar, and the effortless flow of a well-executed formal affair.

The Return of the Omega Ball stood as more than a social event; it was a reminder of the importance of gathering with purpose. It celebrated legacy, honored community, and created space for beauty, connection, and pride to take center stage.

Bravo, Gentlemen!

On the evening of November 17, 1911, Omega Psi Phi, Fraternity, Inc. was founded inside the Science Building (later renamed Thirkield Hall) at Howard University, located in Washington, D.C. The founders were three undergraduates — Edgar Amos Love, Oscar James Cooper, and Frank Coleman. Joining them was their faculty adviser, Ernest Everett Just.

From the initials of the Greek phrase meaning, “friendship is essential to the soul“, the name Omega Psi Phi was derived. That phrase was selected as the motto.

Manhood, Scholarship, Perseverance, and Uplift were adopted as Cardinal Principles.
